OBITUARIES

Mrs. Joseph Irby

Mrs. Dottie Crowder Irby, age 79, of Appomattox died early Friday at Matoaco. She was the wife of the late Joseph Thomas Irby.

She was born in North Carolina, a daughter of Edward Thomas Crowder and Sarah Woodson Crowder. She was a member of Memorial United Methodist Church, where she was a member of the choir and United Methodist Women and a former Sunday school teacher. She was a retired registered nurse, and was a past deputy registrar of the Appomattox County Health Department.

She is survived by one brother, Thomas Crowder of Virgilina, and a number of nieces and nephews.

Funeral services were held Sunday at 2 p.m. from Memorial United Methodist Church, with burial in Central Baptist Church Cemetery.

Robinson Funeral Home was in charge of arrangements.

MISS WHITE'S 5TH GRADE 4-H CLUB

Miss White's 4-H club had its third meeting, Nov. 13, 1975. Our president, Laura Walton, called the meeting to order. The committees told what projects they accomplished last month.

Mr. Goldman told us that there will be pine seedling available to the members who would like to have some.

Then the meeting was turned over to Mrs. Walton, who had a very interesting program on Christmas crafts.

The meeting was then adjourned.

Air Board Approves Plan By Paper Mill

Virginia Fibre Corporation's plan for reducing by June 1st the odor from their Riverville paper mill that has brought complaints from citizens in four counties has received the approval of the State Air Pollution Control Board this week.

Board members and company officials will sign a consent order December 10 formalizing the board's approval.

The order will call for a two-phase program for reducing the ordor to a tolerable level.

Ivan C. Henson, director of Lynchburg's regional air control board office, told the board the odor never will be completely eliminated by the company has the best technology available for reducing it to a tolerable level.

John F. Steedley, Virginia Fibre vice president, told the board the first phase of the odor control program will be completed by March 1.

In answer to a question from Elizabeth H Haskell, a board member, a company engineer said the first phase will cause "some reduction" in the odor.

Henson recommended approving the company's plan that calls for two package boilers to serve as a back up for the bark boiler as a pollutant incinerator.

He said "Our staff feels it is better."

Virginia Fibre officials said they find the consent order to be "fair and reasonable."

Henson told the board their only alternative would be to close down the mill.

In response to questions, Steedley outlined the company's progress in installing the new equipment.

He said some equipment already is on the site and the piping is 70 per cent complete.

He told the board specifications have been sent to bidders on other equipment.

He said the only hang-up seems to be a gas fan. The company still needs some information on the type of fan needed to get the required pressure at the boilers. page

Steedley told the board the company is "either on or ahead of schedule" in abating the odor.

Board members offered several changes in the draft consent order.

The company was asked to add some instruments to measure the gas flowing through the boilers.

The order also was changed to relieve the company of making monthly status reports to area news media. The reports will be given to the board for release to the media.

Referring to Henson's earlier comment, Donald S. Daniel Jr. board chariman, asked about the affects of the "tolerable odor" on susceptable persons.

He said one area doctor has reported having to prescribe additional medication because of the odor.

The point was supported by E. A. Harris, who lives within three miles of the plant, who said on Nov. 18 the odor was so harsh he came ill.

Harris's comment was similar to many who attended a November hearing at Amherst County High School, complaining about the odor.

USDA EXPECTS 16½ GAIN IN FEED GRAIN SUPPLY

A 1975 feed grain production projected at 23 percent above 1974 means 1975-76 feed grain supplies should total about 219 million short tons, according to a report issued today by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. This level of supply represents a 16 percent gain over 1974-75, but is otherwise the smallest in five years. The small 16 million short ton carryin was cited as the reason for the low level of supply.

The number of animals consuming grain is also the lowest in recent years, but signs of increases in domestic feeding are beginning to appear in response to favorable relationships between produce prices and feed costs.

October-December broiler markettings may be about 10 percent above the reduced levels of late 1974 and should continue larger on into 1976. Hog producers are expected to have 6 percent more sows farrow in December 1975 - February 1976, while cattle feeders recently made small increases in placements, raising the number of cattle on feed on October 1 by 2 percent above year-earlier levels.

It is likely that feed grain use for doemstic livestock and poultry feeding will range between 123-132 million short tons in 1975-76, while exports will likely set a new record of 48-52 million short tons, up from 39 million in 1974-75.

Feed grain prices will likely run somewhat lower in 1975-76 than in the past year. Corn prices at the farm, for example, may average between $2.50 - $3.00 per bushel, compared with about $3.00 in 1974-75. Soybean meal prices in relation to corn likely will continue favorable.

Consequently, soybean meal feeding will continue heavy relative to total concentrates fed.

ECONOMIES IN BUYING LIFE INSURANCE

BLACKSBURG People often have sacrificed adequate protection for insurance policies that will be paid up early, a Virginia Tech Extension home management specialist, says.

"People frequently use poor judgment in buying life insurance because of their desire to get the insurance completely paid up while they are still young," Hilda Dailey, the Extension specialist and an assistant professor in Tech's College of Home Economics, said. They purchase limited payment policies, often at the expense of buying enough total coverage to meet their needs, because the premiums for total coverage policies are high and the family budget during the early years is usually quite strained, she explained.

"Use the amount of money you can afford for straight life rather than limited pay. This gives the family a greater amount of insurance for the same amount of money," Daily said.

You can buy $3,000 more straight life insurance than limited pay for the same amount of money, she said.
